GAME STOPPED BY RAIN

Seminary Defeated Spaulding High, 2 to 0, in the Closing Game of the Series—Only Six Innings Were Played.

Goddard scored a 2 to 0 shutout over Spaulding high yesterday afternoon at the Seminary campus, in a game which terminated at the close of the sixth inning in a downpour of rain. Smith, the Goddard twirler, pitched a no-hit game, striking out twelve of the nineteen batters who faced him in the six innings of play. Cutter, though credited with only two strikeouts, allowed but two hits, each good for two sacks.

Goddard's runs came in the fourth, after two, or virtually three, men were out. It happened thus: Wisbart, first up, landed on the ball for a two-bagger into center and stole third; Lee fled to Williams. Priest was out, hit by a fair ball; Smith, next up, fanned viciously at the ball three times, and when the catcher dropped the last strike, Smith liked for first. A Smith made a good throw, which Grigg muffed. Wisbart crossing the pan in the mix-up which followed. In the meantime, Smith had reached second, seeing later when Cutter, in trying to catch him asleep, made a wild throw into center. Richardson, at the bat, fled out to Stuart.

Spaulding placed a man on base only once, in the fourth, when Grigg was given a free pass to first, reaching the next sack on a passed ball. Smith, however, fanned, and Maiden fled out to Richardson, making the side out. Smith's gilt-edged work in the box. Cutter's stop of Wisbart's liner in the first, and Kenefick's fly catch in the third, which he doubled over to Williams at second, catching Tinkham, were features of the game. The score:

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

5-INNING GAME WON BY THE I. A. C.

Contest with St. Michael's College Yesterday Was Very Promising When It Was Stopped by the Rain.

A downpour of rain at the end of the first half of the fifth inning stopped the game at the Berlin street grounds yesterday afternoon between the Italian Athletic club and St. Michael's college of Winoski, but it was enough to call it a game, however, and the Italians won it by the score of 4 to 0. With the clouds practically all cleared away and the sun shining brightly some time before the game started, a crowd of about 300 people had gathered, expecting to see a good game.

St. Michael's went up in the first inning and allowed the Italians their four tallies, but after this inning settled down to good ball playing until the rain drove them from the field. The Italians were primed to give any team a hard fight for the money yesterday. They awaited the ball for five hits, including a two-bagger by Gabelloni, in the four innings, and in the field executed three gilt-edged double plays.

In the first inning, Maher was up to bat first for the visitors, and he clouted out a two-bagger into right field. The next man drove a liner through Weaferi in the pitcher's box, sending Maher to third. Stewart then hit in front of the plate and Weaferi threw him out at first and Calagani returned the ball to the plate in time to catch Maher attempting to score from third.

In the second inning, after Weaferi had given O'Neil, the first man up, a pass to first base on four balls and had fanned out Marceau, Charbonneau rapped a grounder to Davidi at third, and he threw the batter out at first and Calagani returned the ball to Shiner, who covered the sack and touched out O'Neil, who attempted to make that base from first. The third double was made in the fourth, when Weaferi made a right-handed catch of a liner off Stewart's bat and snapped the ball to second, catching Dower off the base.

The Italians got their four tallies on a base on balls, an error and singles by Davidi and Weaferi and a two-bagger by Gabelloni. The score:

Nervous Prostration Long Endured Before Remedy Was Found.
Miss Minerva Reminger, Upper Bern, Pa., writes: "For several years I had nervous prostration, and was utterly wretched. I lived on bread and beef tea because my stomach would not retain anything else. I took many remedies, but obtained no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I began to gain at once. Am now cured."

WAGNER'S HOODOO.

Veteran Ball Tosses Blames Battering Blump on Camera Man.

Hans Wagner has discovered his batting goat. It is the camera man. For a month or more the great shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates has been walloping the ball at a 240 clip, a very low average for the only Homer. The fact that he might possibly lose the hitting honors of his league and thereby machine offered by an automobile company to the leading batter of the two leagues seems to have got on the nerves of the "Flying Dutchman," and consequently he is now a prominent member of the grouch club. Recently the camera man was engaged to take several pictures of Wagner on the ball field. Wagner is superstitious and has no use for the picture men. The photographer managed to snap him as he was picking up his favorite bat ready to take his turn at spheres walloping in Brooklyn recently. On his return to the bench the camera man tried to snap Wagner again, but the big Dutchman spied him and immediately picked up a ball and hurled it at the picture man with all his might. The snapshotter escaped by an eyelash.

There is one thing that Mr. Wagner should bear in mind, and that is if it were not for the great publicity given to the game by the newspapers and the stories and pictures of the players published in the same Mr. Wagner might never have accumulated the big fat bank account that he is said to have stored away in Crampton. Perhaps Hans was instrumental in having Mr. Tom Lynch announce that rule prohibiting photographers on the ball grounds during the game. It is high time that the different newspapers get together to teach these grouchy ball tossers and stung ball magnates a good lesson. To tell the truth, baseball seems to be no longer a sport, but a business.

Here's a tip to you, Mr. Wagner. Cut out your fooling. Your present battering blump is not due to the camera man, but to your own failure to connect with the ball at the proper moment.

OLD TRADEMARK WEARS OFF

Clark Griffith is Not Old Fox He Used to Be Years Ago.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, through the appreciation of some writer for his shrewdness of brains, was called a few years ago "the old fox." He carried it around for a long time with justice to himself and the man who bestowed it.

But Griffith's foxiness has waned apparently. Recent actions have served to show that his gray matter is not working as efficiently as before. Last winter Griffith was one of three managers involved in a trade. He swapped Bob Ewing, Huggins and "Rebel" Oakes for Pitcher Beebe, Storkie and Covaleskie. The swap was an exceedingly bad one. Storkie died. This was unfortunate. Covaleskie has been chased back to the minors, and Beebe is not going much better. The latter is the only man left him, while Ewing is pitching fine ball for the Phillies and Huggins and Oakes doing well at St. Louis.

Meeting to Consider Subject Adopts a Resolution Authorizing Gov. Prouty to Appoint a Committee to Draw New Law.

The conference on weights and measures, called by Governor G. H. Prouty, was held yesterday afternoon in the board of trade rooms, Montpelier, and was attended by over 40 men. Much interest was manifested in the matter, and before adjournment the governor was empowered to appoint a committee of five men to draft a bill to provide for the best possible system of weights and measures regulation in the state, to be submitted to the legislature.

The meeting was called to order by Gov. Prouty, who expressed his pleasure and surprise at the large attendance. He was pleased because of the interest it expressed and surprised because he had not expected many people who would be interested in this matter, which is a new one to most of us. He stated that the conference was called because in other states certain conditions exist which are very bad and, supposedly, they exist to a greater or less extent in this state. It was the idea of the conference to shed light on the question and stimulate interest among the people at large in a matter which is vital to all. He bespoke the efforts of the press in spreading this interest. The governor said that men were present who have studied the matter from various angles and who are in a position to give positive evidence as to conditions. He introduced first P. E. Hazen of St. Johnsbury, general superintendent of the Fairbanks Scale works, who has been one of the delegates from this state to the national conference on weights and measures, held at Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the bureau of standards.

Mr. Hazen sketched the history and growth of these conferences. The first one was held in 1903, and shortly before that time a letter was received at the office of the scale works from Governor Bell, asking that someone be appointed to serve as a delegate. Mr. Hazen was chosen and he has attended three of the five conferences held since that time. On arrival at the meeting, he found it to be made up mostly of sellers of weights and measures, he being about the only one present who was not officially connected with the matter. The whole movement arose from the act of June 14, 1836, which provides for a set of standard weights and measures and forwarding a set of the same to each of the states in the union.

There was such a set sent to this state, and they are supposed to be in existence to-day, but Mr. Hazen stated that State Treasurer Bacon was unable to make up a list of them when so requested. The state treasurer is required to seal weights and measures for the

These two forms of colic, spasmodic and flatulent, are acknowledged the most fatal and dangerous of horse ills. They come on so unexpectedly, so varied, so sudden, one never knows when to look for them. It may be just after starting out for the day's work or just after the day's work is done or at midnight; it is simply liable to meet you at any time or place, if you have a horse. Then, too, the case may be slight, recovering in half an hour, while in the next case the horse is dead in the same time. How important, then, for the owner or caretaker to familiarize himself with his horse, the symptoms and conditions, and be prepared at any and all times, as far as possible, to cope with this dread disease. Everyone having the care of horses should make a study of the symptoms of colic in the horse. When, after a drive or a day's work, or from any unknown reason, your horse acts suddenly strange, shows any of the symptoms heretofore mentioned, perhaps having been exposed to a change of feed, overworked or driven too hard, the horse looks at his sides, appears to have a desire to lie down, take his ears in your hands; if they are warm and pulse is natural, look out for colic. Hence, one should provide himself with some simple and reliable preparation, of which there are several on the market, put up in very convenient form and recommended very highly. He should then remember a good veterinary is the assistance to have, when possible to obtain, and when the horse is showing any signs of an attack of colic stop and take time to thoroughly investigate. Remember, minutes count in this disease. If colic is apparent, get the horse to a comfortable stable, provide plenty of bedding in a box stall if possible, send for your veterinary and give a few doses of some reliable colic preparation, warm soapy water enemas; blanket warm and then await results. Do not ride or run him up and down the road; do not fill him with turpentine, gin or whiskey—he has already more in his system than he can take care of.

and gently reared, women will find in all the seasons of their lives, as maidens, wives and mothers, that the one staple, wholesome laxative remedy, which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally and which may be taken at any time, when the system needs a laxative, with perfect safety and really beneficial effects, is Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

It has that true delicacy of flavor which is so refreshing to the taste, that warming and grateful toning to the stomach which responds so favorably to its action and the laxative effect which is so beneficial to the system when, occasionally, its gentle cleansing is required.

county treasurers, and they, in turn, for the town treasurers, who are supposed to seal for anyone who has standards they want tested, for a fee. The law has become a dead letter, said Mr. Hazen, and is ridiculous. He quoted at length from the records of the sessions of the national conference, showing what has been done and giving expressions of opinion from persons of authority.

The speaker said that what was needed in Vermont in legislation in line with the best in other states. We want one man with authority to enforce this law. The state treasurer is at present the custodian of the standards of the state, and he is the man who should be sent to Washington as delegate to the conference. An appropriation should be made to enable him to do so.

L. A. Fischer, head of the division of weights and measures of the bureau of standards, was the next speaker. After speaking briefly of the scope and work of the bureau, he turned to the matter of special inspections in the states. About a year ago, an appropriation was made by Congress of $10,000 for the purpose of making inspection of weights and measures in the states of the union. So far, 26 states and 80 cities have been covered. In Vermont, the places visited are Barre, Burlington, Rutland, St. Johnsbury and Montpelier. In all of them, said Mr. Fischer, the conditions are about alike. Of the scales, 40 per cent. were inaccurate and of these 88 per cent. were short weight. All of these figures are averages of the results in the five places. In one city two samples of print butter showed 18 and 14 1/2 ounces to the pound and sold for the same price. In another place, the half-pound prints were short. In some instances, liquid measures were used in place of dry measures. Beans, apples and other fruits sold in bulk were wrongly measured by using the wrong number of pounds for a bushel. An oil pump was found 33 per cent. short. The most significant statement of the whole meeting, perhaps, was that made by Mr. Fischer to the effect that in every group of 5,000 people there is a loss of $1,000 per year, if all their butter is bought in print.

The speaker went on to say that if one man in a place is dishonest, it forces the others to make some kind of a concession, either by cutting prices or short weight. The only protection is inspection and rigid supervision.

Mr. Hazen said that as long as Vermont has no adequate laws the state will be a dumping ground for shippers. They cannot send short weight or short measure goods into other states that have the protection, so they send them here and we have to pay for a part of the stuff consumed in the more fortunate states.

Mr. Fischer read some figures, which showed the conditions which exist in the package trade. Rice, corn and wheat were taken up, and it was shown that, while they cost around 5 cents a pound, when sold raw, when sold in the various package forms the cost runs to as high as 35 cents a pound. Other forms of package goods were shown to cost much more when put up in a package than when sold in the raw state. This was taken to be one of the causes of the high cost of living, by Gov. Prouty. Where our fathers lived on the raw stuff, we have them served in an attractive package and pay three times as much.

Mayor James Burke of Burlington spoke regarding conditions in his city. He said they had a man who was supposed to inspect and seal weights and measures, but that he did it only when the state of his finances prompted him to do the work and collect the fees. Instances of short size in milk bottles and in other lines have been reported. Mayor Burke wanted to see action taken to put this state on par with the best in this matter.

Percy E. Pope of this city spoke regarding short measure in fabrics and in packages. He said that 30-inch cloth seldom measured that width and other measures were short. In this way the dealer was giving short measure every day, but could not help himself.

Inspector F. S. Holbrook, the man who has been making the inspection in the state, was called on. He said that the honesty of the general store man in the state was not questioned, but he instanced a case to show that there are some men who should be looked after by a state officer with power to enforce the law. He went into a store and found all the scales and other apparatus in first-class shape. He noticed some five-pound packages of goods, which the dealer had put up ready for filling or ders. He weighed some of these and found that they weighed four and three-fourths pounds, showing that there was something wrong, and not with the scales, either. He reported several other instances of this line that went to show that there are some individuals in the state who are short-weight artists. He showed that this throws an additional burden on those who are honest.

H. W. Clement of Rutland spoke as a coal dealer. He said they have a nice ordinance in his city, but it hits only the coal men and is class legislation. But it is not carried out and amounts to but little. He spoke of the two sizes of coal bags used, one holding 100 pounds and one 80 pounds of coal. He said that he had seen ten of the lighter bags delivered for a half-ton of coal. He said weighing on city scales was a costly burden to the dealers and was no guarantee of honest weight, as it was easy to drive around to the yard after weighing and throw off a few bagsful.

E. H. Deavitt, state treasurer, said that in the past 20 years his office has been called on four times to seal weights and measures for county treasurers. He thought that legislation should be procured that would provide a good workable system, under the management of one man. He suggested the appointment of a committee to draft such a law. Mr. Clement supported this suggestion and said that he thought a stimulation of interest was of vital importance.

H. A. Blake of Sutton said that when it was known that he was to attend the meeting the people in his town said that there was no need of his going, as they had a set of instruments. He found that this set was stored away in an old paint shop, which had been owned by one of the men who had charge of them. He said that he was not satisfied with them and he wanted to see the town have a new and up-to-date set and have them used as they should be. Mr. Blake then made a motion, which was slightly amended by Arthur J. Whitham of South Royalton, with his consent, for the appointment by the governor of a committee of five men to draft a weight and measure bill and submit it to the next session of the legislature.

Henry E. Field of Rutland regarded the compulsory inspection and sealing of weights and measures the vital point in the proposed law. He said that without this feature there would be no protection against any dishonest man.

Mayor Dawley made a few remarks, in the course of which he touched on certain cases of shortage, which have come to his attention. President J. A. Delloer of the board of trade spoke of his pleasure at attending and his interest in promoting the meeting and the question for which it stands.

Gov. Prouty closed the meeting with a few remarks, in which he said that this matter is closely related to the problem of high cost of living, which is the most serious one before us to-day. By discussion of the matter, the people may be brought to understand and take such steps as shall do away with a great deal of the evil.

A vote of thanks was extended to the board of trade for the use of its rooms, and the meeting then adjourned.
